JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE AND ANTISPASMODIC,

the best remedy for

CHOLERA, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA, and NERVOUS AFFECTIONS,

is held in the highest repute in all parts of the world. It allays pain, and produces sleep, without causing the excitement and cerebral disturbance which often follow the use of opiates.

From W. B. Johnson Esq., Opium Supt., Patna.

"This is to certify that Captain Jeremie's Sedative has been tried by me in several desperate cases of Cholera with wonderful effect: I can confidently vouch for its being an invaluable medicine."

From Sir Charles D'Oyly, Bart.

"Jeremie's Sedative, administered to me by Dr. King, was always attended with the effects of completely soothing the pain, and leaving no bad effects whatever. It has indeed saved my life more than once."

From Dr. Jackson, Apothecary General, Calcutta.

"This is a highly valuable preparation. I constantly employed it with the most favourable results—in no case finding that it left behind it the troublesome effects commonly produced by opium."

From Civil Surgeon Wynne, Patna.

"In no case of Cholera where I have exhibited it have I met with a failure of recovery."

D. S. KEMP AND COMPANY.
PHARMACEUTICAL CHEMISTS,
5, ELPHINSTONE CIRCLE, FORT, AND BELLASIS ROAD, BYCULLA, BOMBAY,

specially established for the careful dispensing of prescriptions, and the importation and manufacture of

PURE DRUGS.
CHEMICAL AND PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS.

Under the management of D. S. KEMP, eight years partner in the late firm of ROGERS & Co.

D. S. K. & Co., in sincerely thanking the public for the ready and generous support accorded them, have much satisfaction in stating that they have now more thoroughly organized their business, and are extending its various departments, so as to meet fully an d promptly the wishes of all who favour them with orders. It has from the beginning been their care to insure the perfect purity and trustworthiness of every preparation they make, as being the only means of securing uniformity and correctness in the dispensing of prescriptions.

They have also endeavoured to reduce, as far as consistent with quality, the prices of all the articles in which they deal, and the demand which has arisen for many of their preparations amply assures them of public approval.

PRINCIPAL ESTABLISHMENT;
5, ELPHINSTONE CIRCLE, FORT.
BRANCH
BELLASIS ROAD, BYCULLA.

MESSRS. CHARLES KINLOCH & Co.'s VIRGIN SHERRIES.

Messrs. D. S. Kemp & Co. have much pleasure in intimating that they have been appointed the Bombay Agents for these unrivalled Wines, and that the first consignment has just been sampled with the most gratifying result. The Sherries of the above Firm are well known to the more epicurean of both Indian services, who have long cherished the name of Chas. Kinloch and Co. in that connection although rarely able to obtain illustrations of their vaults. The shipment now landed consists of the following:—

SHERRIES—		Per dozen.
Virgin, dark green seal	Pale Wines of good consistence, fine flavour, and rather dry.	Rs. 21 22 25
yellow seal
green seal
Amontillado..		32
PORT.....		26
CHAMPAGNE—Finest Dry, early bottled.....		32
BRANDY—Fine Old		30

In addition to these, D. S. K. & Co. are now offering the following which will repay attention—

PETIT CHAMPAGNE—a light effervescing Wine obtained through Messrs. G. M. Munn & Co. ... 26

D. S. KEMP & Co.'s No. 1 Brandy, reputed to be the finest in India 33

CLARET—Excellent breakfast, Bordeaux—bottled.. 11

SAUTERNE—In excellent condition 22

Bombay. D. S. KEMP & Co.

MEDICINE CHESTS. The Chests known under D. S. K. & Co.'s name are made expressly for them in England, and have peculiar adaptations for tropical climates.

There can be no doubt of their incalculable utility to

Residents	Planters
Tourists	Contractors
Travellers	Mariners

and all whose circumstances or avocations remove them from immediate medical assistance.

Abundant testimony to their value has been received from purchasers who have attributed their freedom from epidemics to their having these boxes of remedies always at hand.

Experience is constantly being taken advantage of to improve the Chests, and render them as perfect as portability will allow.

In ordering, it should be stated for what purpose the Chest is required, and whether for the use of one individual a family, or a party.

Bombay. D. S. KEMP & Co.

AUSTRALIAN EXTRACT OF BEEF.

IMPORTANT TO MESSES.

A large Consignment of the above Extract in beautiful condition has just been received by the undersigned, Agents for Messrs. H. M. WHITEHEAD & Co., Clarence River, Australia, and is now being sold at the low price of Rupees Six per Pound.

Messrs. WHITEHEAD & Co., who own some of the finest pasture land in Australia, now export their Extract to most quarters of the world. It is of exquisite flavour, keeps for an indefinite period, and makes the most delicious Soups, Gravies, Sauces, and Cordials.

Rs. 6 per lb. Considerable reduction in taking a large quantity.

Bombay. D. S. KEMP & Co.

NOTICES.

NOTICE is hereby given that from and after this date all Interest of the undersigned in the Divan Exchange, Refreshment Room, and Ice Cream Saloon has ceased, and all Outstandings will be recovered and liabilities paid by the present Proprietors thereof—Dated this 26th day of November 1868.

The Bombay Gazette

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1868.

CERTAIN journals, including our local contemporary, have fallen foul of Mr. Massey, for justifying the late intended annexation of Mysore, in a speech addressed by that gentleman to the electors of Liverpool. The ex-Finance Minister of India was interrupted by sundry fights and outbursts of hissing peculiar to a fiercely contested election. Vivid imaginations have assigned this hissing to a dissatisfaction on the part of an intelligent home public, with the policy of annexation in India. The idea is dramatic; and would reflect credit upon the population of Liverpool, as evincing the knowledge they had acquired upon one of the most intricate and debateable of Indian questions; but, unfortunately, it seems that the fighting and hissing of the "intelligent, &c., electors" were just as rife before Mr. Massey had said a word about India at all, as they were afterwards, leaving it open to conjecture that, had he gone dead against annexation, the turbulent party opponents, who were hissing the man and not his measures, would have exhibited precisely the same amount of dissatisfaction.

This, however, is quite by the way; and, considering how ricketty a cause the fanatical section of the anti-annexationists have to advocate, a little disingenuous assumption ought not to be too hotly pulled to pieces. But it may not be time thrown away, since the matter has cropped up again, to give a brief resumé of the Mysore raj, if only to prevent amiable sentimentalists from fortifying themselves with that most spurious of all arguments, as applied to the majority of Indian dynasties, the impolicy of upsetting the sway of an "ancient ruling house," which has, by the subtle force of tradition, wound itself around the hearts of the people. In other words, to dispel the idea that the same sentiments which, even to this day, throw a romantic halo around the unfortunate Houses of Stewart and Bourbon, are applicable to such cases as that of the Mysore raj. In "Red Gauntlet," Sir Walter Scott discribed the final departure of the Young Pretender (young then no longer) from the shores of his ancestors' kingdom, in language which none could peruse without a feeling of deep commiseration for the last of a great house, thus stepping down to the dreary strand of the Solway Firth, in the cold grey light of a winter's dawn, knowing well that the land he was leaving he was leaving for ever;—with despair behind him, and exile and poverty before him. Heightened in effect by all the vivid skill of the great novelist, this picture, if historically less accurate than some, was perhaps the most pathetic of all that he had ever drawn. But, supposing that that ill-fated expedition had been a success, and that it was the Hanoverian Prince whose obscure departure it had fallen to the lot of Sir Walter to chronicle, how could he have redeemed it from the commonplace? How, at any rate, have made it appeal to the sympathy of every reader? And yet, the one man was far worthier than the other; only his name would not have been enwrapped in that mysterious sanctity which belongs to the traditional. Neither Richard nor Henry Cromwell, nor the Duke of Reichstadt, make that impression upon our imaginations, which the two Charles Edwards and Louis XVII. (the little Capet) so readily create. All of them lost great positions; but then so differently. An appeal, therefore, to the imagination usually pass very well on behalf of an expiring dynasty. To say what right have we to pull down the representative of a venerable house, and seat some commonplace Major or Civil Servant upon his throne, is with some of greater effect than would be the most powerful of all arguments. We can all comprehend the assumed feelings of a people compelled to transfer their allegiance from the descendant of their ancient kings, to the unsympathising, inelastic parvenu, whom a superior strength has enabled us to thrust upon them as their virtual ruler. And in cases where this happens, justifying facts need to be literally hammered into the heads of many people, before they will consent to regard it with common patience. When, however, such an appeal cannot be fairly made in behalf of a superseded raj it is quite as well that the fact should be plainly stated, and we have no hesitation whatever in stating that, be the policy what it might, (of which we do not speak to-day,) there were no sentimental, no traditional arguments existing, which could be used against the proposed annexation of Mysore, either upon the death of Tippoo in 1799, or upon the decease of the late eminently successful experiment in political sentimentality.

Like most of the Hindoo States of Southern India, the history of Mysore, until a comparatively recent date, is involved in mist. There are traditions and fables, accounts half mythological, half legendary, in existence, which mostly involve a student in a profitless mesh of absurdities and impossibilities; but not till a period long after most of the present reigning Houses of Europe had become established dynasties, do we come to anything demonstrably authentic concerning this "ancient kingdom of Mysore." In 1310 the Mahomedans from Delhi predatorily invaded Southern India and ravaged Mysore. In 1321 this invasion was repeated by Mahomed Tohluk, who incorporated the whole region with the Empire of Delhi. Subsequently it was lost, owing to dissensions at head-quarters. Soon afterwards (1336) a couple of adventurers from Waranjal founded Bijayanagar; and thence arose the most powerful Hindu dynasty in Mysore of which we have any reliable account—its power attaining to its zenith about the year 1565, when the pretensions of Ram, the then Raja, threw upon him the hostility of the surrounding Mahomedan powers. The Sultans of Beejapore, Ahmednugger, and Golconda confederated against Rajah Ram, and in a great battle near Dharwar entirely defeated him. Rajah Ram perished in this battle, his camp and capital were plundered, under circumstances of extraordinary barbarity, and the ruined family of the dead Rajah fled to a distant part of the country, where they either died out or sank into total obscurity. Thus ends one dynasty, after a couple of hundred years lease of power. Dissensions again prevented the Mahomedans from consolidating their conquests, and the polygars, or petty chieftains, began to grasp at independence and aggrandisement on their own account. One of these, the chieftain of Mysore proper, that is of the region lying round about that then insignificant town, was eminently successful, and his successors following his example, they rose, in process of time, to considerable power, possessing Seringapatam, Bangalore, and the greater part of the Mysore table-land. By paying assiduous court to the Viceroy of the Emperor they received the protection of the Court of Delhi, and one of them, named Chicki Deo, was specially honoured by Aurungzebe, and succeeded in accumulating an enormous treasure in gold—a treasure which his grandson dissipated in buying off his predatory neighbours. Chicki Deo's great grandson, Cham, was deposed and murdered by one of his Generals, and a puppet Rajah substituted for him, who was but very slightly connected with the late reigning family. So that in less than 100 years another raj had ruled over Mysore, and like that of Ram Rajah, had finally passed away. This brings us down to the comparatively recent date 1737. The rule of a couple of Peishwahs, or maires du palais, if we may so say, succeeded, the puppet Rajah being retained in virtual captivity, possessing no power whatsoever. The second of these maires du palais was deposed by Hyder Ali, who from small beginnings had risen to supreme power in the state; and who then commenced reigning in the name of the Rajah, as he whom he had deposed had hitherto done. In process of time this wretched puppet died; and was nominally succeeded by his son, a lad of eighteen. The latter, however, during Hyder's absence in a campaign endeavoured to assert his authority practically, but failed, and was deposed, dispossessed of his state allowance and of all his jewels, and turned forth to live as best he could in a mean abode, where none but Hyder's trustiest slaves were allowed admittance. A second unsuccessful attempt of the same nature led to his being strangled, and to his brother Cham being exalted as third puppet Rajah in his stead. This was in 1772. In 1775 the latter died, and thus ended the third Hindu dynasty of Mysore, after reigning (?) forty-four years. Hyder, however, determined to keep up the farce a little longer, and there being no direct descendants of the last house existing, he resorted to a fanciful expedient, for the purpose of selecting his successor. Collecting all the male children, in any degree capable of claiming kinship with the late family, he introduced them to a hall, on the floor of which were strewn flowers, fruit, toys, and other attractive articles, and encouraged them to help themselves. Most of the children pounced upon the sweetmeats, but one seeing a little dagger glittering at his feet, seized that in one hand and some fruit in the other, and Hyder affecting to consider this as an omen that he would grow up a prince who would both acquire and keep, selected him and created him Rajah in the room of Cham. This child (than whom no one ever more woefully falsified an omen) was the imbecile old debauchee whose death so lately caused such a tremendous annexation-policy discussion here and at home, and concerning whose succession Mr. Massey has been speaking. His relationship, even to the Chicki Deo dynasty, which would itself, if now existing, not be more than 250 years old, was, as will be seen, of the very remotest, and in Europe would be held to be altogether non-existent. In him, in fact, the dynasty of whose romantic sorrows we have heard so much of late both began and ended, as we purpose showing in an ensuing article.

OUR London contemporary, the "Standard," excited by the Manchester speech of Lord Salisbury, has, in a leading article à propos of his remark that the question of Indian cotton is mainly a question of conveyance, thus discoursed about cotton:—

"The crop, grown especially for a foreign market, and which is most likely unadapted to native looms, would be useless to the ryot unless the merchant who buys it of him can carry it away. The ordinary native means of conveyance would be not only too expensive, but they would be highly detrimental to the quality of the freight. A bale of cotton is impatient of rough usage, and the jolting of a bullock-cart over a country road would be simple destruction to the staple. Long Sea Island would be no better than the shortest Bengal after travelling a couple of hundred miles; and the prospect of a return in grey shirtings would be but a poor one."

What a wealth of imagination the writer must have possessed, and how his heart must bleed for the sufferings of ill-used cotton bales!

IN our notice yesterday regarding the outbreak of cholera in the 25th N. I. it was not made clear that the lengthened stay of that regiment in the lines at Boree Bunder was before it went to Abyssinia. The regiment was quartered for about a year in the Boree Bunder Lines before proceeding to Zoula, and shortly after its return to Bombay proceeded to Sholapore.

WE (Indian Public Opinion, Nov. 20) hear that the gentlemen who have just arrived in Lahore, and are deputed to survey the new line for the Peshawur Railway, having pitched their tents on the maidan behind the Fort, were robbed the other night of nearly everything they possessed. The perpetrators of the deed have not yet been discovered, although the police are on their track.

H. E. THE GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO CARWAR.

THE Governor returned from Canara yesterday. In addition to his personal staff His Excellency was accompanied during his visit there by the Hon'ble Mr. Ellis, Colonel Kennedy, Secretary to Government P. W. D., and Mr. Wedderburn.

The object of the Governor's visit to Carwar and Coompta was, we understand, to form his own opinion, by personal observation, as to the construction of a railway from the cotton districts to the former port. We believe we are correct in stating that Sir Seymour Fitzgerald is fully satisfied that the development of the great natural advantages of Carwar will never be secured without the formation of a railway, and that he proposes to have the line by the Kygah Ghaut surveyed with the view of ascertaining the approximate cost of a line of railway in that direction.

After leaving Carwar, the Governor and his party paid a visit to the Falls of Gairsoppa, and, during their stay there, went out for a day's bison shooting at a place some six miles distant from the Falls. The party were very successful, as they came across a herd of seven bison, of which two, a bull and a cow, were bagged. Of these the former, a very fine bull indeed, fell to the rifle of the Governor. A third bison was also wounded, but owing to the lateness of the afternoon, the idea of tracking it through the jungle had to be abandoned.

A WORD ON THE WATER RATES.

WHILE we entirely sympathise with our daily contemporary in his desire to bring about a more equitable levy of the water rates, we are not disposed to permit the attempt to force the Octroi and Transit Duties Bill through the Legislative Council by hydraulic pressure. The water supply and the water rates have nothing to do with the general question of municipal

For Aden—Sergeant A. Banks and servant.

For Suez—Major and Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Fowes and child, and Mr. E. K. Raxton.

A FEW days ago we stated that Captain Bird, who arrived by last mail, had had his arm broken on Saturday by the accidental overturning of a buggy in which he was driving. We are sorry to learn that after the accident the broken arm became gangrenous, and after a consultation it was decided that it was necessary that the limb should be amputated. The operation was performed yesterday morning by Dr. Mackenzie in the presence of two or three other doctors.

THE WILSON TESTIMONIAL.

A MEETING of the general committee was held on Thursday evening in the Town Hall, to receive a report from the honorary secretary, Mr. Douglas, as to the progress that had been made in carrying out the wishes of the community in reference to the interesting movement that has been originated, and to consider such further measures as might be thought necessary for bringing it to a successful issue. The secretary's report was considered satisfactory, and some useful suggestions were adopted for placing the subject of the proposed Testimonial before the native portion of the community in a more direct way, both in Bombay and the Mofussil, than the committee had hitherto been able to do. The names of Mr. Harry Rivett-Carnac, Civil Service, Nagpore, Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, Mr. Dosabhoy Framjee Karaka, and Mr. Sorabjee Shapoorjee Bengali were added to the committee. We have to remind our readers that subscriptions to the fund may be paid in to the new Bank of Bombay.

THE AGE AND WORKS OF HEMADRI.

Mr. Bhau Daji read his paper on the age and works of Hemadri of which the following is an abstract.

Reasons were given for supposing that Hemadri was a Brahman of the Madhyandiniya Sakha of the Sukla Yajur Veda, and that he flourished at Devagiri or Dowlutabad. The works in Mr. Bhau Daji's possession were—

1. Chaturvarga Chintamani.
2. Muktaphal.
3. A commentary on Wagbhat, called Ajur Veda Rassayana.

The Chaturvarga Chintamani treats of the Dharma Shastra, i. e. or custom of practice, civil and criminal law, penance, essential ceremonies, acts of pious liberality and ontology. The manuscript was half incomplete. Hemadri divides the work into five parts:—1, Vrata Khanda; 2, Danda Khanda; 3, Tirtha Khanda; 4, Moksha Khanda; 5, Parisesha Khanda. Of these the last two were not found. A very brief statement of their contents was given, also the names of various works and authors quoted—Hemadri's commentary on Wagbhat was briefly noticed.

From the Muktaphala, there appeared reasons for believing that a Pandit named Bopadeva was the real author of the works attributed to Hemadri. Mr. Bhau Daji showed that this Bopadeva is different from the author of a Sanskrit grammar now largely taught in Bengal, and that the Bopadeva to whom the Vaishnava Bhagwat is attributed was, if tradition be correct, also a different and older author, as there are portions of the Bhagwat quoted in the Chaturvarga Chintamani, and the Bhagwat itself is recommended to be bestowed as a gift.

With regard to the age of Hemadri, Mr. Wathen's copper-plate grants published in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. V., pp 178-188, dated Saka 1212 (A.C. 1291) and Saka 1194 (A.C. 1273) contains the following facts. In the Yadu race was Raja Bhillum succeeded by Jaitrapala, his son was Singhana, Krishna, his younger brother was Mahadeva, Ramchandradeva, the son of Krishna, his minister was Hemadri. This last was the prince who succumbed Randwa Jadava to the power of the Mahomedans.

In an inscription on a stone slab found at Patan near Chalisgaon by Mr. Bhau Daji, and published by him in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1864, the Yadava Rajas Bhillum, Jartrapala and Singhana are mentioned and the date of that inscription (Saka 1128 or A.C. 1206) is perfectly compatible with that of the copper-plate grants.

The genealogy of kings given by Hemadri himself is similar to that of the copper-plate grants. The capital of the kingdom is called Devagiri in Setunda-desa, which was evidently the ancient name of the Dowlatabad district. Hemadri's own genealogy is Vamana, Vasudeva, Kamadeva. Hemadri flourished at the end of the 12th and beginning of the 13th century of the Christian era.

The second paper was read by Mr. Bhau Daji on Mukunda Raja, the premier poet of Maharashtra. He is the author of three works, Viveka Sindhu, Paramamrita, and Mukusthamba. In a verse about the middle of the Viveka Sindhu it is stated that he was called Parisha Ballala, his son was Jaitrapala, and that he caused the work to be composed." Mr. Bhau Daji believed that the Ballala here mentioned was the same as Bhillum, and that Jaitrapala was identical with Jaitrapala of the inscription. Various stories regarding Mukunda Raja and Jaitrapala Raja are current in Maharashtra. Mukunda Raja flourished, it thus appears, about the end of the 12th century of the Christian era.

Dr. Bühler said that he was glad to see Dr. Bhau Daji bring forward a paper like the one just read, containing an account of the works of so eminent writers on Hindu law and custom as Hemadri. Papers of this kind were absolutely wanted in order to fix the chronology of the mediæval Hindu writers, to settle the extent of the various law-schools and to prepare, in this manner, the way for a history of the Hindu law, which, up to this time, had never been attempted, and, in fact, was impossible. Hemadri's date was fortunately ascertainable with certainty, and might again serve to fix the dates of other works on law. Adverting to some of the particulars in Dr. Bhau's paper, Dr. Bühler called Dr. Bhau's attention to the Oxford and Berlin Catalogues, where also some of Hemadri's works had been described, and from which some additions might be made to Dr. Bhau's list. Regarding the list of authorities quoted by Hemadri, Dr. Bühler stated, that the works of Visvarajah, Jayanta, and Aparaka existed in the Maratha Country, though there seemed to be some difficulty in persuading the owners to give up their copies. The Grigasutri of Saunaka, quoted by Hemadri, belonged most likely to the Rigveda, and not to the Atharvaveida. Saunaka was the teacher of Asvalayana, and was said to have burnt his own sutras in favour of his pupil's productions. But the Mitakshara certainly quoted his works. In conclusion, Dr. Bühler thanked Dr. Bhau Daji for his paper, and expressed a hope that Dr. Bhau Daji would soon give the Society an article on Sagara Madhava and their relation to Vidyaranga Svamin, a matter which was still enveloped in obscurity. Dr. Bhau Daji would, no doubt, be able to throw a new light on it by the help of his stores of MSS. and inscriptions.

Rao Saheb Vishvanath Narayan Mandlik—I have much pleasure in seconding the proposition of Dr. Bühler that the Society offer its best thanks to Dr. Bhau Daji for the very able and interesting paper he has favoured us with to-day. The works of Hemadri are not cited as authorities on the Vyavahara (or civil law) as enforced in the Courts of this presidency; but they are in great repute amongst the people, and their publication will serve greatly in settling doubtful and contested points of law as observed by the various schools in India. At the last meeting, Dr. Bühler gave us a paper on the date of Vidyaneshavra, and the present communication by Dr. Bhau Daji I take to be merely an earnest of what he has in store for our Society—a small instalment of what is due to us from the learned Vice-President.

In conveying the warm thanks of the Society to Dr. Bhau Daji for his interesting paper, Dr. Wilson, the Honorary President, said that he fully agreed with the remarks made upon it by Dr. Bühler and Rao Saheb Vishvanath Narayen Mandlik. The importance of bringing to notice the allusions and statements which fix the time when Hemadri flourished, he added might be well illustrated by the indefinite notice of him taken by the accomplished Mr. Arthur Steele in his "Summary of the law and custom of Hindoo castes," in which it is merely said—"Hemadri containing 12 divisions, (100,000 Shlokas): by Hemadri Bhatta Kashikar. This is a very ancient work of notoriety, treating of all subjects. He should be glad to find, he also said, that Dr. Bhau Daji could find leisure amidst his fruitful researches, to continue his inquiries about the age of the Maratha poet Mukundraj, and his claims to be considered the oldest poet of the Mahrathas, about which a difference of opinion exists among the Marathas themselves. The language of Makundraj did not appear to him so ancient as some supposed.

Mr. Martin Wood inquired in regard to the note on Mukundraj, whether the Marathi language was settled at the date when Mukundraj wrote.

Rao Saheb Vishvanath Narayan Mandlik said—I think it was. The works of this author prove it in some measure; and the works of Dnyaneshwar, who followed Mukundraj, confirm this opinion. Dnyaneshwar's great work in Marathi is his learned and elaborate commentary on the celebrated poem, the Bhagavatgita, which gives us Shaka year 1272 (A.C. 1350), as the one when it was composed; so that there is no doubt whatever as to the date of this author. From this work and the works of Mukundraj, there can be no doubt that the Marathi language was well settled at that time.

The best thanks of the Society were voted to the contributors to the Library and Museum for their valuable presents, and the meeting was then adjourned.

REPORT OF WRECKS ON THE COASTS OF BRITISH INDIA FOR 1865 TO 1867.

A REPORT has been issued by the Government of India giving details of the wrecks which have occurred off the coasts of British India for the years 1865, 1866, and 1867, from which we select the following particulars.

In 1865 the number of wrecks was 28, of which 7 were reported by the Bombay Government, 6 by that of Bengal, 3 from Madras, 8 from Burmah, and 4 from Ceylon. The tonnage of these 28 vessels has not been completely ascertained, as returns of the tonnage of four vessels have not been given; but if the average of the vessels whose tonnage is given be assumed as approximate for those vessels regarding which there are no returns, the total tonnage of the 28 would be 16,843 tons. Of the vessels wrecked, 10 were in ballast and 18 were laden, of which 11 cargoes were lost. The lost cargoes generally consisted of rice, timber, coal, and merchandise. No value of cargo has been given in any of the returns submitted, so that no estimate of the value of property lost can be given. Only 6 lives were reported to have been lost, but this cannot be considered accurate, as several returns omitted to state whether the lives had been saved or lost. Though the largest portion of wrecks occurred off the coast of British Burmah, it is remarkable that none were caused there from stress of weather—at least, bad weather is not recorded as the cause of any of the casualties. The approximate causes of the wrecks appear to be—from stress of weather, 6; neglect or unskilfulness on the part of those in command, 6; unskilfulness or neglect of pilots, 2; mishaps, 7—(2 from fire, 5 from being old and leaky, and 2 from inaccurate reckoning, owing to error in chronometers); and 7 from causes which may have been unknown, or which, at least, not reported. Of the 28 vessels wrecked, 17 sailed under British colours, 4 under French, 3 under American, 1 under Hamburg, 1 under Dutch, and in two cases the colours were unknown.

The vessels which were reported lost by the Bombay Government were—the Sydenham, 1,236 tons, in ballast, lost on the South-West Prongs, entrance of Bombay Harbour, in January 1865, crew saved; the s. s. Johnstone Castle, 131 tons, with general cargo, lost in January on a sunken rock, west of Melunda Fort, Malabar Coast, crew saved; the pattamar Dustagury, tonnage unknown, laden with brandy, piece-goods, yarns, &c., which sprang a leak and sank off Gungawallee Bunder, coast of Carwar, in January, with a loss of two lives; the Lord Brougham, 1,078 tons, with general cargo, lost on the Chettwaie Reef, Laccadive Islands, in March, crew saved; the Glen Saunaz, 1,200 tons, with coals, lost on the South-West Prongs, entrance to Bombay, in March, crew saved; the Ellora, 948 tons, from Liverpool to Bombay, with general cargo, in May, off the port of Bombay, crew saved; and H. M.'s s.s. High Lindsay, 411 tons, attached to the Persian Submarine Telegraph Co., lost off the Basadore Beacon in July.

"Out of the 17," we read, "returned as sailing under British colours, four were native vessels. It is, to say the least of it, a most extraordinary circumstance that there should be only four wrecks of native vessels returned, and that two of these should be old and leaky vessels. Considering the number of native vessels which are to be seen in every port, considering the state of unseaworthiness in which nearly all of these vessels are, and the utter ignorance of the persons in charge, of which I have seen many instances, it is impossible to suppose that only four of the whole have met with disaster during the year. The native vessels represent the coasting trade of British India. It is observed from the wreck returns of Great Britain for 1866 that, of the total number of British sailing ships lost in that year which amounted to 1,804, no less than 1,308 were coasting vessels, leaving only 496 as over-sea vessels lost; of the 119 steamers lost, 92 were coasters and only 27 over-sea; and out of the whole number lost on the British coasts, of British and foreign vessels, in 1866, being 2,289 vessels with a registered tonnage of 427,000 tons, only 373 vessels were over 300 tons. In the return for British India for 1865 we have only four vessels returned, as representing the casualties to the coasting trade of British India in one year; the greater portion of the ships lost are of large tonnage and may be supposed to have good commanders, good crews, and all the adjuncts which modern science admits of to ensure proper navigation, while the old, rotten, leaky native vessels, which every observant person must see in every port, commanded by men of no knowledge and no experience and utterly indifferent to the comfort or safety of their crew or passengers, come off with a very small proportion of loss. It is quite true that native vessels are not generally supposed to be employed during the dangerous part of the year, but that no less than 21 wrecks out of 28 occurred during the time of the year when native vessels are at sea, and it must be concluded that either ignorance is better than science, or that the Government absolutely know nothing of what occurs to the coasting trade of the Empire or to their native subjects who are employed on it." In order to get at some idea of what the Indian native coasting trade really is, Lieutenant Colonel Fraser, who has prepared the report, suggests that a return from every port on the coasts might be submitted, say on the 1st of every month, showing the number and tonnage of all native sea going vessels in port on that date.

The wreck statement of 1866 shows an increase of 4 wrecks compared with the previous year, the number being 32. Burmah again had the largest share of wrecks, viz. 10, Bombay 9, Bengal 5, Madras 4, Ceylon 3, and the Straits 1. Of the 32 wrecks, the tonnage of one vessel lost near the Moscos, the name of which was unknown, was not ascertained, but again taking the average tonnage as that of the unknown vessel, the tonnage of the whole number would be 16,100 tons. Six of these vessels were in ballast, and out of the 26 cargoes, 10 were saved. The cargoes chiefly consisted of rice, timber, salt, coal, tin, specie, and sundries. The returns of the loss of life give it at 35, but this cannot be correct, as the number of lives lost in the wreck of the Diamond off the island of Bombay was returned as "several," and is therefore not included, and it also very possible that the unknown vessel wrecked off the Moscos may have lost all hands. The approximate causes of wrecks are—from stress of weather 5, no less than 11 from ignorance or carelessness of their sailing masters or officers on watch, only one while in charge of a pilot, in Maulmein River, 4 from mishaps, and 11 from unknown or unreported causes. The nationalities of the vessels are classed as 26 British, 3 French, 1 Siamese, and 2 unknown. Of these, 7 were returned as native vessels.

The wrecks reported by the Bombay Government were—the s. s. Jeddo, 1,109 tons, from China to Bombay, with general cargo, lost in February on the Choul Kadoo Rocks, Malabar Coast, near Bombay, crew saved; s. s. Maharaj, 120 tons, from Goa to Jeytapore, in May, at the entrance of Jeytapore harbour, when 12 lives were lost; Stafford, 939 tons, from Liverpool to Bombay, with coals, on the South East Prongs, entrance to Bombay harbour, in June, crew saved; Diamond, 1004 tons, from Jeddah to Calcutta, with salt and pilgrims, which was dismasted at sea, became unmanageable, and grounded on the rocks at Breach Candy, Bombay, in June, by which a large number of lives were lost; Zenobia, 1,414 tons, from Calcutta to Bombay, with rice and gunnies, which struck on Choul Kadoo Reef, south of Kennery Island, crew saved; Vickery, 182 tons, from Zanzibar to Bombay, with ivory and sundries, which struck half a mile north of Colaba Fort, crew saved; Chapman, 750 tons, from Liverpool to Bombay, with coals, which struck on Colaba Reef in July on account of miscalculation of position and want of the proper use of the lead, crew saved; Thewis, 801 tons, from Shields to Aden, with coal, which in August was lost 5 miles north of Alibaug, crew saved; Die Vernon, 999 tons, from Liverpool to Bombay, with general cargo, which in August struck on a reef off Colaba, when three lives were lost.

The wrecks for 1867 are more numerous than those for the two previous years, the number being 37, or 9 more than in 1865, and 5 more than in 1866, with a very considerable loss of life and property. The tonnage of three of the vessels lost has not been given, but taking the average of those returned as that of these three, the total tonnage of the 37 vessels would be 18,953 tons. Ten of the vessels were in ballast; of the cargoes of the remaining 27 vessels 10 were saved and 17 lost. The principal items of cargo lost were cotton, silk, grain, copper, timber, coal, specie, and sundries. The number of lives reported to be lost was 49, but that does not include the loss of life from on board three vessels the crews of which were all supposed to have been lost. Of the 37 wrecks, 12 were reported by the Madras Government, 10 from Bengal, 5 from Bombay, 4 from the Andamans, 3 from Burmah, and 3 from Ceylon. No returns were sent from the Straits. Most of the wrecks on the coasts of Madras, Bengal, Ceylon, and the Andamans occurred at the beginning of the north-east and end of the south-west monsoon. The approximate cause of wrecks was—from stress of weather 22, from neglect or unskilfulness of those in command 3, from neglect or unskilfulness of pilots 2, and from mishaps 10. The nationalities of the vessels were 32 British, 2 American, 1 Dutch, 1 Arab, and 1 unknown. Of the 32 British vessels, 15 were native craft.

In the report for 1867 the following remarks occur:—"The Terah and the Merchant Prince were lost at Bombay, the former by mistaking the new light on Kennery Island for the outer light ship, and the latter for mistaking the same new light for the one on Colaba. The loss of these two large vessels show the absolute necessity there is for having, where there is more than one light, a proper system and distinct characters for the lights; nothing requires more thought and care than this, and no new light should be allowed to be put up without the authority of the Government of India, given after consultation with some competent officer or officers. People are often in a great hurry to get a light-house, but there is nothing which requires more consideration, or upon which more may depend, and no project of the kind should ever be passed hastily."

FIFTH CRIMINAL SESSIONS OF 1868.

SEVENTH DAY: FRIDAY, 27TH NOVEMBER.

(BEFORE THE HON'BLE SIR JOSEPH ARNOULD.)

ATTEMPTED MURDER AT POONA.

MICHAEL SMITH, a drummer in H. M.'s 96th Foot, was charged with attempting to murder John Joyce at Poona on the 24th September.

Mr. Ferguson appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Branson for the defence.

Mr. Ferguson opened the case by stating the facts which were these—The prisoner was a drummer in the 96th Regiment, at present quartered at Poona. On the 24th of September, at between eight and nine in the evening, he was in the regimental canteen in company with a private named John Joyce and others. Prisoner left at shortly before 9 o'clock, and Joyce also left at about the same time, and they both went towards their quarters. They had had some words, nothing more. They then separated and went to their respective rooms which were some 200 yards apart. The prisoner in about twenty minutes came to Joyce's room and said to come out and fight him, and Joyce said he would do so. Thereupon the prisoner gave Joyce a push, Joyce gave him a blow, and prisoner then struck him on the head when Joyce fell down crying out "hospital" and became insensible. Two men of the 96th who were close by had rushed forward to separate the men, and these would tell that Joyce's clothes were saturated with blood. A sergeant was called down, and by his assistance, and that of two men, Joyce was taken to the hospital. One of the men took from the hand of the prisoner a razor numbered 3,532 which was the regimental number of the prisoner. Smith had run away, but, when Joyce was taken to the hospital, search was made for the prisoner and he was found at the wash-house with blood on his drawers. The corporal who took prisoner to the guard room, would tell them he was quite sober and the surgeon and apothecary would tell them the nature of Joyce's wounds,—two on the scalp and an incised wound four inches long on the lower part of his neck, to the left side and cutting the superficial jugular vein,—and that his life was for some days in danger. These, he believed, were the circumstances, and if the witnesses proved these facts as he had stated them, then the jury would be most reluctantly compelled to come to the conclusion that this man, an Englishman, and wearing Her Majesty's uniform, had made use of a razor for the purpose of attempting to murder his comrade.

John Joyce (an Irishman) was the first witness, and he supported the facts as stated by the learned counsel. In cross-examination he stated that the words he and prisoner had were about the head of a tambourine. He was not in the band, but there was a man playing a fiddle in the canteen that night, and he went over with a tambourine to get some amusement. He was quite sober, and could not say that prisoner was the worse of liquor. The head was slack, and prisoner said that his tambourine had a bad head. That offended him, and he said that he could not have a better head without having nuts and screws to tighten it with, and added that he knew how to put the head on a tambourine before prisoner ever knew anything about it. Prisoner called him a liar and he retorted that prisoner was a liar. He did not strike prisoner nor abuse him for being an Irishman.

The Judge—Why the witness is an Irishman himself. (A laugh.)

Mr. Branson—Well, did you abuse him as being of another country?

Witness—No. I did not know where he came from. I hear some people saying he is a Dublin man, but I don't know. (A laugh.) In the canteen after I called him a liar I said I did not think it worth my while to fight him. About twenty minutes after I was in the barrack room. Prisoner came and challenged me to fight. I am quite sure he spoke first. I agreed to fight, and the first blow I felt was that on the head with a sharp instrument. I had not struck him before that, but I did so afterwards.

After the examination of the witnesses referred to in the opening statement,—the evidence of the medical gentleman being that the cuts had been inflicted with tremendous force—

Mr. Branson addressed the jury for the defence. He suggested that the prisoner might have been taking his razor to the quartermaster sergeant to get it numbered, urged that there was no proof of cold bloodedness in the case, that there must have been more provocation than had come out in evidence, and that—though to his credit he had not shown it today—there must have been some old grudge on the part of Joyce and that he had tried to make the most of the case.

His Lordship then summed up in very neat terms. He asked the jury if they could believe the suggestion by the counsel for the defence as to the taking of the razor to be marked, and showed that if the jury believed the prisoner had gone for the razor and used it after there was time for his blood to cool, then the death of the man would not have come under the exceptions from murder, had Providence not mercifully decreed that Joyce's life should be spared. If they believed the evidence, the only question was, whether he had attempted to commit murder, for there was no doubt that he had inflicted serious injuries and had acted in a manner which was cruel and, thank God, unusual with Englishmen—or Britons including Irishmen.

The foreman of the jury said it was unnecessary for His Lordship to read the evidence, for they were ready to give a verdict. They at once found the prisoner guilty of both counts—attempting to commit murder and inflicting serious injury.

His Lordship expressed his approval of the verdict, and then passed sentence, in doing which he said—Under the 307th section of the Penal Code, for the offence of which the jury, upon the clearest and most unanswerable evidence, have found you guilty,—you having been found guilty of attempting to murder and having caused hurt to an unfortunate man, and hurt of the most serious nature—you are liable to transportation for the term of your natural life. Being a European the sentence of transportation is inapplicable to you, but under section 56 of the Act you are liable to be sentenced for an equivalent term of penal servitude. The equivalent term of servitude is penal servitude for life, but I will not pass upon you so dreadful a sentence as that. Still, the sentence which I am bound by my duty to the community to pronounce upon you is a heavy one, and that sentence is that you be held in penal servitude for the term of ten years. It is a most abominable and wicked offence.

THEFT FROM A SPINNING COMPANY—Ebrahim Jewunjee and Pandoo Balloo were placed at the bar on a charge of stealing, on 10th November, three bales of yarn from the premises of the Manockjee Petit Spinning and Weaving Company—prisoners being servants of that Company at the time of the offence.

The first prisoner pled guilty to a charge of receiving the stolen property, and the other pled not guilty.

His Lordship said that the charge against the first prisoner was a serious one, and unless he heard anything in mitigation from the prosecutor, he should feel bound to pass a severe punishment. With regard to the other prisoner he was acting only as a servant under the former, and therefore his case was very different.

Mr. McCulloch appeared for the prosecution, and said that he would state the circumstances as he had been instructed, and then it would be a question whether the case against the second prisoner should go to the jury. The second prisoner, he showed, had been a chowkeedar in charge of the premises of the Company, and his duty was to lock up the premises every night and take the keys to Mr. Brown, the European manager. The night he was an hour late in bringing the keys to Mr. Brown and gave as his excuse that there were so many windows to close. Now, this was a bad excuse, because there were no more windows that night than any other night. Then a witness named Moosa would tell them that on the same night he drove with the first prisoner to the premises and saw him get the three bales passed out to him at an opening in the door. It was his duty to state that probably Moosa was too much of an accomplice to be heard as a good witness for the prosecution.

After some conversation as to the corroborative evidence, His Lordship said he would not advise the prosecution to offer any evidence as against the second prisoner. The learned counsel accepted this, and His Lordship then instructed the jury to give a verdict, finding the second prisoner not guilty, which would mean that the charge was not proved. The jury accordingly did so and the second prisoner was discharged.

Mr. Ferguson said he appeared on behalf of the first prisoner, and wished to make some remarks in mitigation of sentence.

His Lordship remarked that he had read the evidence and thought the charge a serious one, but he would hear what the learned counsel had to say.

Mr. Ferguson said the prisoner had pled guilty on one count under his advice, and he had to submit for His Lordship's consideration that this was the prisoner's first appearance in a criminal court, and that he had for a long time been in the employment of this Company and ever held a good character.

His Lordship said he might state what he had heard ralied by experienced Judges in England. That was, that when a man was employed in an office of trust his good character was a reason for holding that position, and therefore his goodness of character was used as an instrument to affect any offence he might commit against his employer's interest, and so was no reason for mitigation of sentence. Such was the case with the prisoner now at the bar, and therefore he could not allow the goodness of his character to lessen any sentence that he should feel it his duty to impose. Were there any recommendation from the prosecutor it would be a different thing.

Mr. Ferguson urged that up to the time of this offence prisoner had held a very good character and only succumbed to temptation.

The Judge—Oh, I don't see that. He was in a position in which he was bound to resist such temptation.

Mr. Ferguson then asked mitigation of sentence on the grounds that the longer prisoner was confined with bad company, the worse he might grow, and that he had a large family dependent on him.

The Judge—The lightest sentence I can pass consistent with my duty to the community, is the weightiest sentence which the Penal Code permits me to pass. He has pled guilty to receiving, and I have no doubt he was guilty on all the other counts. The sentence is that he be held to rigorous imprisonment for three years in the County Gaol. It is a very bad offence indeed.

THE BEAU IDEAL OF A GENTLEMAN.—George Johnson, an elderly-looking man, apparently of African descent, was placed at the bar on a charge of criminal breach of trust.

It seemed that he and the prosecutor—apparently as to race a chip of the same block as the prisoner—had arrived by ship in Bombay. They had been living together, but one day prosecutor missed his box containing his clothing and money. On searching for it he met prisoner in Duncan Road driving in a buggy, with a new coat, new pants, and new round hat,—all his clothing was new, in fact. And then prisoner was lying back in the buggy with his feet on the splash-board, smoking a cheeroot and pulling his whisker, so that he looked (the prosecutor said mid the laughter of the Court) quite a gentleman and could scarcely be known. The prisoner said he was determined for fair play in this business; and so cross-examined the prosecutor and
